

Weather Emergencies

- Canned goods: Canned foods can provide essential nutrients when fresh food isn't available. Make sure you have a manual can opener.
 - Vegetables
 - Beans
 - Tuna, chicken, other protein
 - Soup or chili
 - Juice
 - Canned or powdered milk
- High energy foods: These portable, filling snacks stay good for at least six months and are an excellent source of carbohydrates.
 - Peanut butter
 - Crackers/Pretzels
 - Granola bars and trail mix
- Dried foods: When fresh fruit isn't available, dried offers a source of potassium and fiber.
 - Apples
 - Apricots
 - Raisins
- Comfort foods: A treat can lighten the mood during a stressful storm.
 - Cookies
 - Hard candy
 - Tea or instant coffee
- Sugar, salt, other seasonings: You may be able to cook on a grill or camping stove. Seasonings will improve fresh and packaged or canned food.
- Medication and Supplements: Make sure you have extra medication. Vitamins and other supplements can help replace nutrients not available in your diet.
- Sports drinks: Drinks like Gatorade and Powerade can help replace electrolytes and keep you from getting dehydrated.
- Special dietary foods: Gluten-free, diabetic, etc.

Drinking water: Plan for a supply of one gallon per person per day. Try to plan for two weeks, but a minimum of three days. Pets also need water!

Essentials Grocery List

Fresh produce: If you've had enough warning, you can still pick up fresh fruits and veggies that have a shorter shelf life.

- Apples: Last up to three months when stored in a cool, dry place away from other perishables.
- Citrus fruits: Last up to two weeks without refrigeration, especially if bought before ripening.
- Avocados: Unripe avocados last outside the refrigerator for a week. Excellent source of good fat and fiber.
- Tomatoes: Unripe tomatoes last several days at room temperature.
- Cucumbers, zucchini, yellow squash: Lasts for a few days unrefrigerated and can be eaten raw.
- Potatoes, sweet potatoes, yams: Lasts for a month in a cool, dry place. If you have a grill or camping stove, these make filling side dishes.
- Packaged hard sausages: Stock up on a few packages of dry-cured salamis. They'll last for six weeks unopened.

- Make sure you have a manual can opener for canned goods.
- If you live in an area with frequent storms and power outages, make sure you have plenty of propane or charcoal for the grill.
- Prepare a nice home-cooked meal the night before a big storm. It will be fortifying and comforting.
- Be careful eating food from the fridge or freezer before it spoils. A food thermometer can help you determine if the food has stayed cold enough to be safe.
